BJU REVIEW

BOB JONES University

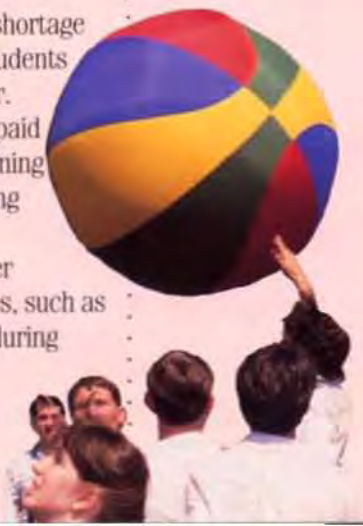
SUMMER 1991

Patriotic service features BJU talent

The BJU Symphonic Band participated in a stirring patriotic rally held in Greenville's Peace Center on February 1. "Operation Homefront" featured speeches by South Carolina governor Carroll Campbell, as well as several other prominent local political figures. The band performed various patriotic and military pieces for the 2,000-member audience. Colin Richards, a senior voice major in the University, led the audience in the national anthem and also sang "God Bless America" as a solo.

About the cover:

There's never any shortage of things for BJU students to do in the summer. Many students get paid for counseling, cleaning or supervising during one or more of the University's summer camps and activities, such as this big-ball game during HELP Conference.



Faculty member commended by Red Cross

Bob Harris of the BJU history faculty received one of 500 American Red Cross national awards for saving the life of a fellow employee using the Heimlich maneuver. He was honored at a banquet and awarded a certificate signed by President George Bush.

BJU named to national honor roll

Bob Jones University was named to the 1991 Honor Roll for Free Enterprise Teaching by The John Templeton Foundation and The Foundation for Economic Education in New York. Only 87 colleges across the country were selected. The University received the award for its strong teaching of the values of Western civilization and the free market economy.

The University was selected by a poll of college presidents and academic deans throughout the country. Other winners this year included Auburn, Stanford, Harvard, Rutgers, Duke, and Villanova Universities.

BJU hosts Job Fair

The University hosted a Job Fair on February 5 to give companies a chance to recruit BJU students. Those present included Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance, Graco Children's Products, Dun & Bradstreet, and WYFF-TV, a local NBC affiliate.

Mrs. Gail Nicholas receives Diamond Key award

Mrs. Gail Nicholas was awarded a diamond key award by the National Forensic League, one of a select number of debate coaches across the country to have received this award. Mrs. Nicholas follows in the steps of her husband, who was awarded a diamond key last year.

Academy forensics squad sets school record

Over the course of the 1990-91 school year, the Academy forensics squad has won seven first-place sweepstakes awards, a school-record, in various debate tournaments throughout the Southeast. Their final victory came at the Trinity High School Tournament at the beginning of March.

Recycling program to benefit WORLD Fund students

The WORLD Fund will benefit though a new recycling program sponsored by the BJU's student-run Community Relations Council. The Council placed containers around the campus to collect the 30,000 aluminum cans used on campus weekly. The Council hopes to donate several thousand dollars to the WORLD Fund each year through the recycling effort.

Comedy show a hit

The Student Body Review II, a comedy show organized and performed entirely by students, was a success again in its second year. The show featured stand-up comedy routines, skits, quartets, juggling, and just about anything students could come up with that was funny or unusually talented.

About 90 acts tried out before a student panel for the available 15 spots in the show, so what made it onto the stage gave the students a night to remember.

Linda, Graves speak in special convocations

Tamsanqua Linda, former mayor of South Africa's Port Elizabeth township, spoke at BJU in March to give an alternate view of South Africa's political condition.

Lieutenant General Howard Graves spoke in April. Graves is the assistant to General Colin Powell, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Graves was accompanied by Colonel George Sumrall Jr., whose daughter Stacie is in the University.

Kinematics, torque, force, momentum . . . Greek to you? It's physics and fascination for Kristy Boyd, a senior engineering science/physics major.

"My major is basically physics, but it has a more practical application with more engineering focus than just straight physics." Her minor is mathematics and, yes, she likes that too.

But don't picture Kristy with a calculator in one hand and a periodic table in the other. She believes in being involved and stretching herself in several directions.

Kristy came to Bob Jones University in 1987 from southern Illinois. She had visited the campus during the previous Thanksgiving on a college trip with her high school. "When we came to BJU, I had the strangest feeling that I had come home. I don't know how to explain it, but I could tell this was the place the Lord wanted me to be."

"My senior year of high school, I took an advanced math class, and my teacher, a mechanical engineer, encouraged me to major in physics. I took her advice and it's worked out pretty well."

"I don't know any where else you could go and find teachers who are as qualified, dedicated and caring as they are here," Kristy says. "I really appreciate the opportunity to be under the influence of the kind of teachers they have here at Bob Jones."

The cultural emphasis is another facet of life at BJU that Kristy enjoys, though she didn't really expect to when she arrived at the school. As she puts it, "It's one of those things where you have to take your medicine before you know you like it. I'm really glad that I've had the opportunity to see Shakespearean plays, the operas, and the guest artists who have performed here. If I had to choose a favorite production, I'd pick Hamlet. I could have watched it several times."

During her four years at BJU, Kristy has been involved in several ministries off campus. She worked in a children's club as an underclassman, and during her senior year, she has been active in a nursing home ministry. When she is able, she goes with a group to a small church in North Carolina to help in Sunday morning services. "I've seen how much churches need people who can do anything—who can get involved in many areas."

This past year, Kristy served as a representative at the South Carolina Student Legislature, a mock congress involving college students from all over South Carolina. On basis of population, BJU was allotted two senators and nine representatives for the three-day session.

Kristy spent her first day on the Committee for Education. "We discussed the bills—whether or not they were worthwhile for consideration on the floor—and made minor changes to make them more clear. The next two days we went into regular session of the house and senate where we debated bills on the floor."

This summer, Kristy hopes to travel to Africa on a medical mission team. She felt the Lord leading her in that direction after hearing a medical student, who had served part of his clinical rotation in Africa, speak on the desperate need in Africa, both spiritually and physically. "I think it is a tremendous opportunity in so many different ways."

And Kristy is one who always looks for opportunity in everything, especially college. "I try to get as much exposure as I can to different things—to have a well-rounded college experience." ■

A Soldier of the Airwaves

From a hard-core Marine to a radio announcer to a preacher, Willie Thompson learned through experience that if you seek God, He will be found.

"My life has been like Jonah's, the story of a man fleeing God, yet unable to get away from Him," says Willie, chief announcer for radio station WMUU in Greenville, S.C.

Willie entered the Marines right out of high school, and feeling that something was missing in his life, he began to search for the answers to his questions.

"With so much time on my hands during a six-month cruise aboard the USS Raleigh," he says, "I decided to read through the New Testament. Maybe I would have gotten saved earlier if someone had understood my need."

Willie's former sergeant was, perhaps, someone who did understand. He invited Willie to a Bible study group held in the base chapel where a navy chaplain was preaching from Isaiah 53.

"I had been to church many times," Willie says, "had heard the Bible read, but never had I understood it like I understood it then."

Willie knelt down beside his bunk after the service and accepted Christ as his Saviour.

"At that time it was as if the weight of the world fell off my shoulders. Things changed. My life and my language changed. Even the troops noticed that there was a difference in my life and my attitude."

Salvation answered many questions he had struggled with about life. But now, as a Christian, more questions arose, such as where the Lord wanted him to go after the Marines.

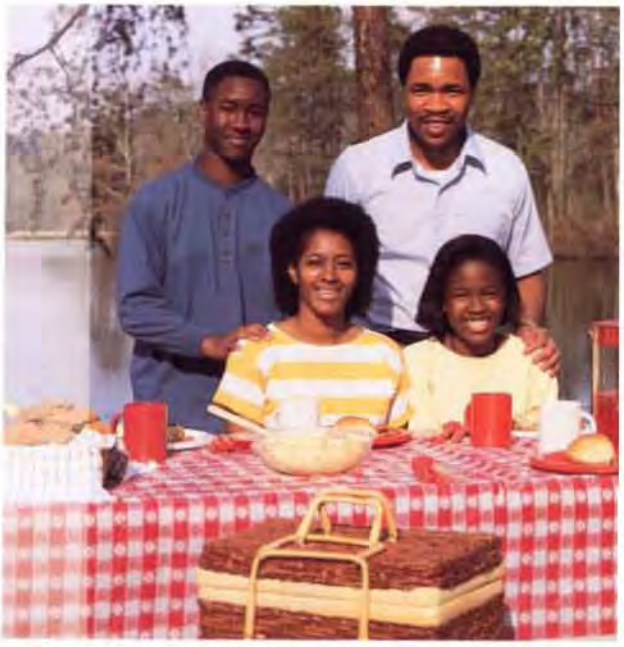
At one time he had considered dedicating his life to finding a cure for sickle cell anemia, a disease that he had watched his sister suffer with and eventually die from. But after two years of studying medical lab technology, God began to speak to his heart about entering the ministry.

"After my sister died in 1974, it was as though the Lord began asking me what if I had dedicated my life to finding a cure for sickle cell anemia. Eventually the body would have worn out and death would have taken over anyway. From this the Lord showed me that there is a part of man that does not wear out, and that is the soul. He also showed me that His desire for me was to preach."

So, following God's leading, Willie enrolled as a ministerial student at BJU the next year. During his years as a student he worked at WMUU in the evenings to help pay his way through college. His interest in radio broadcasting deepened, and he eventually began working full time after graduation. Now as an announcer, he enjoys sharing Christ with others via radio.

"I marvel at the potential for getting the Gospel out through the radio. You can touch so many lives, people you don't even know, and never hear anything about it. You're able to lead people to Christ or to encourage someone, and never know."

Working with people has become the focus of Willie's life. In addition to his job at WMUU, Willie enjoys teaching BJU radio and television interns about radio work. He also ministers in prisons and visits the rescue mission on a regular basis. But the thing he loves most is preaching.



And now, several years later, Willie preaches both on the airwaves and in the pulpit. He and his wife Tracy and their two children, Ty, 16, and Anita, 10, live in Greenville, where Willie preaches at Paramount Park Baptist Church as an assistant pastor.

"Whenever I drive through an area, I think of all the cars and all of the homes that we drive by, all of the people that are involved. And there is no way possible to see how many homes and lives are being touched by that one message that goes out.

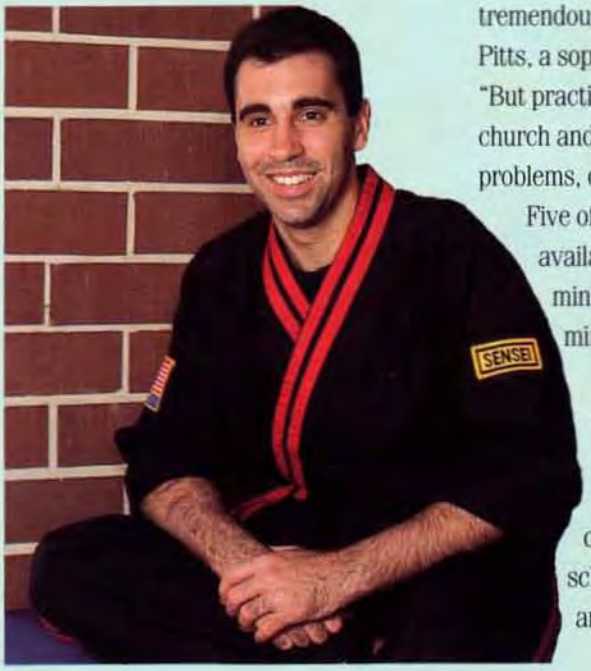
"Wherever the Lord would have me be, in the pulpit or the radio station, then so be it. As a soldier of the cross, a soldier's duty is to serve where he is instructed to serve. And that's what I intend to do." ■

Fully Equipped

Inadequacy. Most young people who have been called into a ministry battle this feeling. Questions constantly bombard their commitment, such as "What should I do?" and "How can I prepare?"

BJU answered those questions by developing a hands-on approach for young people who feel the Lord's call to a ministry. The Division of Practical Studies, part of the School of Religion, offers several majors focused on an area of Christian service, combined with thorough Bible training.

"The straight Bible major gives you tremendous head knowledge," says Jim Pitts, a sophomore pastoral studies major. "But practical studies prepares you for church and youth work—how to face problems, deal with them and fix them."



Five of these "practical" majors are available: adult ministries, youth ministries, camp ministries, children's ministries and pastoral studies.

These majors share several classes, such as the required four years of Bible courses and electives, and courses in the church and home, Sunday school administration, youth work and audio-visual media.

Another common factor is the internship program, in which all men ministerial students serve one semester in a local church. "It was a great opportunity," says Daniel Wagner, a camp ministries major who interned during his junior year. "I was able to preach, teach Sunday school, sit in on board meetings and help in the Bible club."

Steven Huffman, a junior pastoral studies major, served his internship at his father's church last summer. He had the unique opportunity to assist in a wedding ceremony—his grandmother's. "I just did the 'Who giveth this woman to be married?' part, but I was pretty nervous just doing that," he says.

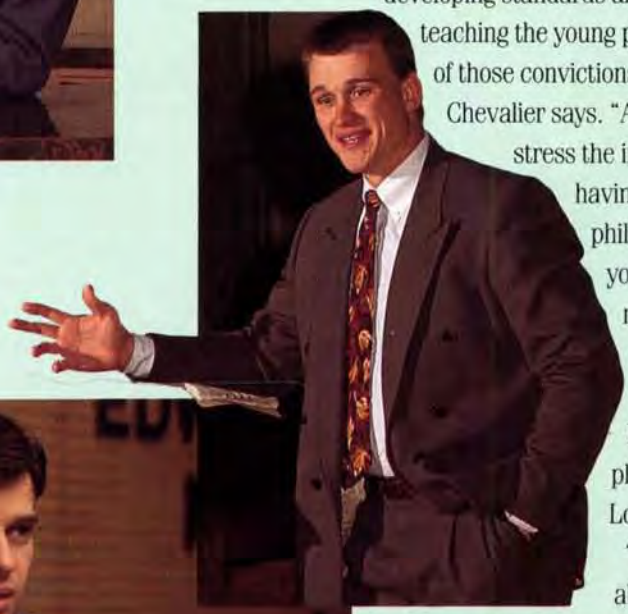
All students in these majors have responsibilities during the summer, too. "The girls have to witness to five people every week, read at least three chapters in the Bible every day, and do a book report," says Dawn Ascher, a junior in youth ministries. "The guys do about the same thing. It's not always easy, but it makes us responsible!"

Individually, each major offers specific classes dealing directly with some area of a particular ministry. For example, the camp ministry major includes classes on recreational leadership, camp administration and camp programs. Children's work, summer Bible ministries and early childhood education are the focus of the children's ministry major.

Youth ministries is a popular major with both men and women. Women students in the major have several elective classes, allowing them to fully prepare themselves in specific areas they are interested in.

A class in youth work is required of all men ministerial students. The class, taught by Mr. Tim Chevalier, is one of the most popular courses among all the majors.

"We talk about the importance of developing standards and convictions by teaching the young people the basis of those convictions," Mr. Chevalier says. "Always, we stress the importance of having the right philosophy in youth work. We must be sure we are doing everything Biblically and pleasing the Lord."



"The class is absolutely awesome," says Brent Sivnksty, a sophomore Bible major planning to go into youth evangelism. "I looked forward to it more than any of my classes."

Mr. Chevalier's burden for young people is the drive behind his class. "There is a void in youth ministry today," he says. "The problem I see is that people use youth ministries as a stepping stone to something else—and young people recognize when they're being 'used' for experience.

"Working with young people is very complex today. Being a youth minister is not just planning an activity every Friday night and teaching a lesson on Sunday morning. It's a full time job."

And BJU is helping prepare men and women for that job, both through the practical studies programs and through other majors. The experience they receive here will be invaluable as they go to "equip the saints." ■

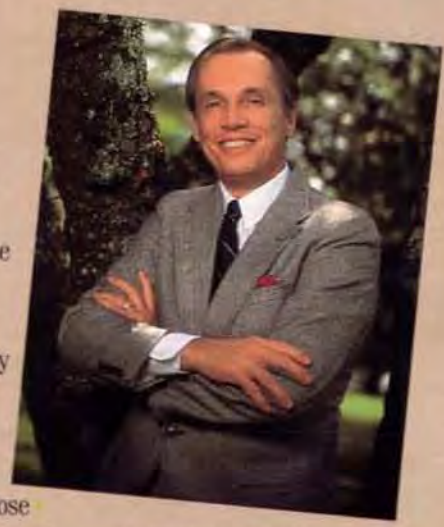
THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER



If you are like I am, you are weary of that which doesn't measure up to its claims. I hate to spend my hard-earned money on poor quality. I don't even mind spending a little bit more if the item I purchase will live up to the claims made about it. The best bargain is usually not that which comes with the cheapest price tag; it is that which endures—which wears well and performs well, or even better, years after I bought it. When I can make a purchase like that, I am a satisfied customer with no regrets.

Perhaps the following letter from a graduate of approximately my own vintage will illustrate from an educational viewpoint what I am trying to say:

"Your grandfather was right…I realize learning how to live and how to keep on keeping on was so clearly the purpose of those blessed years…

"Retrospectively I find it amusing that when I first went to BJU, I thought I was going there for the academics. I know, now, that I didn't, though most certainly I was prepared well. Forgive the professional comment, but I think I can recognize well when it comes to post-secondary education. I have taught and/or served as a junior and senior administrator at four public universities and one public college. I have visited over thirty universities around the world professionally and have some grounds for assessment. What is done educationally at BJU is first-string, and preparation is at a quality level equal to the upper echelon of the finest American universities.

"At age 52, I find those life-structuring experiences of 30-35 years ago have been more important than the subsequent degrees, honors, awards, and training experiences. None of those would have been put into proper perspective if it had not been for the years at BJU. It was the attitudinal development and the stress on the validity of being Christian that set the tone. Keep it well academically, Bob, but more importantly, keep the school right. Lead the young people to realize that with their hearts right with the Lord, and their commitment to excellence for His sake, they will not find a better educational environment to prepare them anywhere else in North America."

Like a quality suit, the longer this graduate "wears" his BJU diploma, the better it fits.

Education is not primarily intended for the purpose of getting one ready for a career, but ready for life. The Christian can't be well-prepared for a Christ-honoring life if the principles he has learned about successful living are merely secular.

A four-year dose of Bob Jones University is good medicine for any life. It is "preventive medicine" now to keep one from contracting some deadly disease of the soul as he makes his way through life. The BJU experience is just as necessary for those who don't plan to have a "career" as for those who do. It is for all Christians who love God and want His Word to be foundational to all their attitudes, relationships, and activities in life. ■

The Official Bob Jones University Watch

The BJU Alumni Association is pleased to offer a limited edition of this distinctive Seiko quartz watch.

A richly detailed, three-dimensional re-creation of the University seal appears on the brilliant 24-carat gold-plated dial of each official University watch. Each timepiece features the precision electronic Seiko quartz movement that never requires winding and is accurate within 15 seconds per month.

The official Bob Jones University watch is being offered in two styles—ladies' and men's—and carries a limited three-year warranty. Upon delivery, you must be absolutely satisfied with the quality, or you may return your watch for a full refund.

The special features of the watches are as follows:

24-carat gold-plated case...mar-resistant crystal... synchronized second hand... three-year battery... battery life indicator (second hand begins moving to two-second intervals when the battery needs to be replaced)... water-resistant to a depth of 100 feet... black embossed calf leather band or lizard strap.

The men's wrist watches are $195 each, and the ladies' watches are $185 each. You can reserve your watches by using the order form below or by calling (803) 242-5100, ext. 3152.

For that special BJU graduate, the official Bob Jones University watch is certain to be a useful and treasured possession for years to come.❖

Five Years: A Look Back

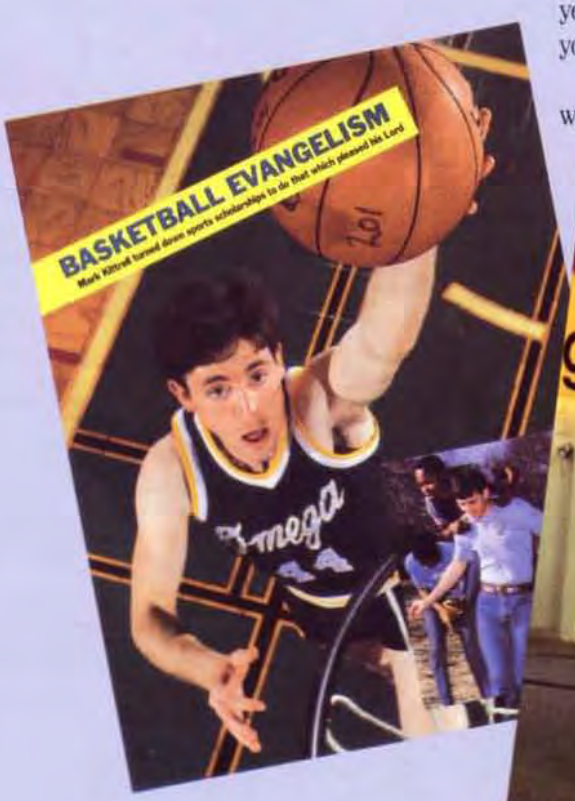
It has been five years since the first issue of the BJU Review was published. For this 5th Anniversary issue, we thought we would look back and update you on what has happened to the subjects we featured in that first issue.

Mark Kittrell

Five years ago, Mark Kittrell was a senior Bible major at Bob Jones University making plans to get a master's degree. Since then, he has received his M.A. in Bible, led the Minutemen Evangelistic team from the University for three years, served as a dorm supervisor, worked as the director of Student Organizations here at BJU, and married Tammisue Atkins in the summer of 1989.

Now, he travels as a staff evangelist for the University and conducts about 40 meetings a year as an outreach ministry to young people.

"I enjoy having a ministry with the public school kids since I went to a public school," Mark says. "Eventually I intend to have a ministry of Christian basketball camps, but right now I'm enjoying doing the one thing I love most, and that's preaching."



Larry Jackson

Founder of Jackson-Dawson Communications, Larry Jackson and his partner Sam Dawson were just beginning to see their audio-visual service grow and had just purchased Cornerstone Aviation in Greenville, S.C. in 1986. Since then, their Detroit and Los Angeles offices have taken off.

"We also opened a Greenville office to serve the Southeast in 1987," Jackson says. "Our corporate philosophy had always been to use part of our profits to assist Bible-believing ministries in their marketing communications, and our first project in Greenville was for a Christian ministry." In 1990 his company merged with a local marketing company owned by BJU graduates. Cornerstone Aviation continues to serve the Greenville Downtown Airport, which is currently one of the busiest general aviation airports in the Southeast.

Dr. Hand

Dr. Richard Hand has become well-known at BJU for the practical value of his lectures. In Bible classes, the dramatic illustrations continue, but now students refer to him as "Dr. Project" because of several study projects he has developed to make students search the Bible and find their own answers. "I'd rather teach students how to make their own bread than just hand them a fresh-baked loaf in a lecture class," Dr. Hand says.

1991 also marked his tenth anniversary of service at BJU, and with the addition of the criminal justice major he has been able to resurrect an old interest—law. Since the 1986 issue, he now teaches both Criminal Law and Constitutional Law as well as his Bible classes. Also, a new computer Bible search program called "On-Line Bible" has greatly helped in his research.

RIGHT DOWN WHERE YOU LIVE!

Computer

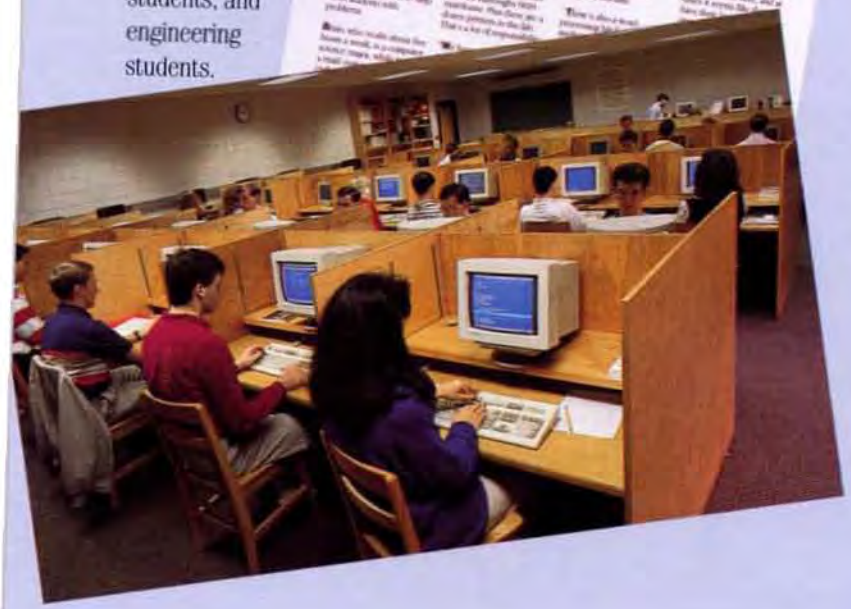
The University's computer investment has nearly tripled since 1986. What used to be 48 micros and a mainframe has advanced to 120 micros, including both PCs and Macintoshes; a mainframe; and an AT&T 3B2 minicomputer for the students.

Since the new science building's completion, the University now has four computer labs—the library lab for general requirement students, the two business labs for the accounting and business students, and the new science wing lab for computer science majors and minors, graphic design students, and engineering students.

"Our software that we use in the lab is kept current by site licenses," says Dr. Gary Guthrie, computer professor. "Hence we teach the latest versions of software including R:Base, Quattro Pro, Turbo Pascal and C compilers, etc. We service over 1400 students a semester and instead of 15 work-loan students to help out in the labs, we now need 30."

COME IN FOR A BYTE!

Forty-eight micros and a mainframe keep students on the leading edge of high-tech



Nursing

When the Division of Nursing appeared in the Review five years ago, the subtitle indicated that the nursing student "has a job waiting for her after graduation." With the current serious nursing shortage, hospitals are not just "waiting" for students to apply, they are actively recruiting them. BJU graduates are highly sought after by healthcare facilities in the Greenville area and across the nation.

The program still has the major strengths it had five years ago, such as three full years of clinical experience and the nursing theory knowledge and practical nursing skills in the second semester. But the program has also added additional emphasis in several areas such as nutrition, gerontology and critical thinking skills, all of which contribute to the expert professional preparation as a nurse generalist.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT: NURSING

This nursing student has a job waiting for her after graduation

As you can see, much has changed in five years. We're thankful for the ministry God has given us here, and look forward to what He will accomplish in the future.

COLLEGE FINANCING TIPS

by Roy Barton, Director of Financial Affairs

Many BJU students avail themselves of the University's Work Scholarship program to help pay their school bills. But this money is applied directly to the student's account, so they must find other ways to come up with spending money.

And, for those willing to do a little digging, many "odd jobs" with excellent pay can be found. People in the Greenville area like to hire BJU students. Over the years our students have proven to be industrious, courteous, and honest, and employers know they're getting their money's worth when they hire BJU students.

Many students work off-campus doing cleaning, moving and yardwork on Saturdays. They can simply sign up at the Office of Student Services during the week. As people from town call requesting workers, jobs are given to students on a first-come, first-served basis. The kids don't even need cars; the people who hire them are often willing to pick them up and drop them off at their dorm or at one of the entrances to campus. If a student misses a meal on campus, his employer usually provides a meal or snacks. Work scholarship students who don't work all day on campus on Saturdays often find this is a good way to earn the cash for day-to-day expenses, while their work scholarship is applied to their tuition costs.

Another way students find jobs is by checking a bulletin board in the post office. When businesses call asking for help, the Office of Student Services makes a note about the nature of the work and displays it on a bulletin board in the post office. There may be a hundred or more notices posted at any given time for temporary or permanent, part-time or full-time jobs. If students find jobs they're interested in, they can call the businesses and arrange for interviews.

In a recent check of the bulletin board, I found notices for both skilled and unskilled positions, including cleaning (homes and offices), child care (in private homes and in businesses), yardwork, freight checkers, salespeople, auto mechanics, secretaries, receptionists, investment assistants, and even an ad for someone to dress up as a rabbit!

The Greenville area is growing rapidly and many "odd jobs" are available. So don't let a lack of finances keep you from coming to "The Opportunity Place." There's plenty for you to do to earn the money you need. ■

Behind the Iron Curtain Stories from the life of John Visser, a pastor from Holland, speak of blessing and danger as he preaches and ministers during trips behind the Iron Curtain.

Biblical Answers to Bothersome Questions Bob Jones III gives helpful answers to thirteen questions, including "Is the Bible reliable?," "Can a Christian control his thought life?," and "How will the world end?"

An inexpensive product?

Or above-average value?

Years from now, long after you have graduated from college, would you really be happy with yourself if you "bought" your college education only because it was cheap?

Although the cost of a Bob Jones University education is hard to beat ($7,020 room, board, and tuition per year), that's not a good reason for choosing BJU.

You see, a cheap education is not always a bargain, because a true bargain is high value for the money spent.

A BJU diploma is recognized as being "high value." Our graduates leave knowing they have received the best possible education and are prepared to serve the Lord wherever they go.

So, when shopping for an education, think twice about a "lowest price" claim. We think you'll find that you can't find a better Christian education value anywhere else—for more money OR for less. Now that's a bargain!
